Witness to the Risen Christ

Without the resurrection, Jesus Christ would have been an anonymous person in history: a man who lived in the region of Judaea, who threatened the Jewish hierarchy, who created a problem for the Roman government, and who was crucified like so many others.

Starting with twelve unknown men from Galilee and down through the ages, the Spirit of God uses the witness of a believing community to share the Good News. In spoken words, hymns sung, shared prayer, and works of care and love, the Good News is proclaimed again and again to bring hope, truth, and love to our world.

Proclaiming the Good News has changed with the devastation of the Coronavirus. People of all ages and from all professions are using their knowledge, skills, and generosity to preserve and protect the lives of others as well as to mourn and bury the dead. They are witnesses of the Good News, not so much through words but through their actions.

Catholic Charities is witnessing the Good News through the generous — and, at times, unsolicited — support of donors; through Catholic Charities staff and volunteers working in new ministries while their regular ministries are suspended; through those who pray for the people served; and through those in need who remind us why Jesus came in the first place. The Good News is proclaimed in these and many more ways as we continue to be witnesses to the risen Christ for and with one another.

Sincerely in the Risen Christ,

Fr. Bob Kelly, OP
